Explicit Information in Film

Information presented in a text or a film can be either explicit or implicit.

- Explicit information is stated clearly. There is no ambiguity or room for interpretation.
- Implicit information is what is implied or suggested, but not explicitly stated.

Divide into small groups. For this exercise, you are going to watch a movie trailer. Follow the instructions below.

1. As you watch the trailer, write down all the explicit information that you learn.

2. Now, as a group, review the explicit information that you wrote down and brainstorm any implicit (implied) information you gathered from watching the trailer.
