Annotation

An annotation is extra information associated with a particular place in a text. An annotation can be a comment or an explanation. Many people put annotations right in the margins of a text as they are reading.

DIRECTION: As you read the assigned text, make the following annotations directly on the handout.

1. In the righthand margin, record questions you have while reading.
2. Highlight something in the text that you think was important.
3. In the lefthand margin, write down a connection you made to another text while reading.
4. Underline the words in the text that you don't understand.
5. Look up the words you don't know. In one of the margins, near each word, jot down a synonym.
6. At the bottom of the text, summarize what it is about in a few sentences.
