

ANSWERS

He was one of Virginia's delegates at the First and Second Continental Congress. He was General of the Continental Army. He helped to draft the U.S. Constitution in 1787 and became the first president of the United States in 1789. Washington largely defined what the presidency would become.