

ANSWERS

The Louisiana Purchase changed the position of the United States in the world. It doubled the size of the country. It made the country much stronger materially and strategically. It provided a powerful impetus for the country to expand westward. It also confirmed the doctrine of implied powers of the federal Constitution.