

ANSWERS

Rather than directly taking part in government, citizens elect representatives to act on their behalf. Those in office vote according to their own judgement, but they must listen to and consider the opinions of the citizens they represent.

They wanted republicanism because its ideas guaranteed liberty, and because they could limit powers which could check and balance each other.

If change can happen too fast, people can vote away their rights and freedoms.