Girls are under more pressure in school than boys (or vice versa).

High schools should have non-gendered restrooms available for students.

There are positive aspects to peer pressure.

Cell phones should not be allowed in the classroom.

The media contributes to negative body image and low self-esteem issues among teenagers.

Schools are not effective enough at preventing bullying.

Some things can only be learned when students are allowed to fail.

Boys face the same body image issues and gender expectations that girls do.

High school students should have more say in what they study.

High school students should have the option to attend school virtually and still be allowed to participate in extracurricular activities.

There is not place for sodas or unhealthy snacks in schools.

School lunches should be free for all students at all times.
