

Stranded on an Island

Imagine you have been in a shipwreck, and you wake up on the beach of an island. On one side of you, there is only ocean as far as you can see. on the other side of you, there is a jungle. The first thing that you do is mark where you are with a pile of rocks and shells. Then you walk along the beach until you get back to where you started. This confirms it – you are definitely on an island. So you turn towards the island’s interior, the jungle.

What do you hope you will find in the jungle? Why?

What do you hope you will NOT find in the jungle? Why?

