An autobiographical incident essay is an essay that tells the story of an event that happened in the author's life. The event is not only important to the author, but it typically has some point of interest or wider application that makes it potentially relevant to other people as well.

An autobiographical incident essay should include:

- An introduction
- An account of the incident
- An explanation of your role in the incident
- A message or moral that you took from this incident (this should be something that is or could be applicable to someone besides yourself)

You should write an autobiographical incident in first person POV.
