

ANSWERS

Edward Ferrars; he wants his family to stop pressuring him so he can find happiness. You can't find happiness doing things just to live up to other people's expectations.

Elinor: Even though her and Edward's family like each other, Edward's family is very snobby, and she knows that it would not be easy for her and Edward to marry; society and class, in this story, are apparently more important than genuine feelings.