

ANSWERS

CAUSES

Laws like the Stamp Act and the Townshend Act had engendered ill feelings from the colonists towards the British government.

The behavior of the colonists outside the Custom House, who were harassing a British soldier.

Also, the behavior of the colonists who were taunting and throwing things at the British soldiers called in to restore order.

EFFECTS

Ill feelings towards the British government increased. The colonists began to see them as willing to use violence against their American subjects.