_____ 1. I often think of the last day that Maggie and I spent together. It was the brightest rainy day I had ever seen in the warmest of winters.

_____ 2. John often watched Maggie from a distance. There had been a time when she had told him everything. Now she was like looking at a work of art, or at some beautiful creature and just . . . wondering. Did she miss him too? Did she think about him at all?

_____ 3. Jason watched Maggie all the time. She talked to her friends. She flipped through her phone. She did her school work. She never turned around to look at him.

_____ 4. Jason often watched Maggie from a distance. He wondered if she missed him, if she ever thought of him at all. Maggie often felt his heavy gaze, and it made her nervous. She wished he would let it go and leave her alone. It was over. That was it. They were finished. She was finished, that is. John wasn't "finished" with the relationship at all.
