

ANSWERS

The task of mending the wall every year is the only thing that brings the speaker and his neighbor together. Literal and figurative borders in general unite what they divide.

There is ambiguity in the title. It can mean mending a wall, or a wall that mends.

The point of view about walls in the poem is ambiguous. One neighbor approves of them, the other doesn't.

If the speaker doesn't like walls, why does he keep putting the wall back up?