

ANSWERS

He had abandoned his plans to restore France's New World empire.

Louisiana wasn't worth much to him without the sugar revenue from Saint-Domingue.

Spain still hadn't transferred Louisiana to France

France and the U.K. were on the brink of war.

Napoleon was angry with Spain, and took advantage of the opportunity to sell something that had no value to him that he didn't even really own yet.