

ANSWERS

1. Subtext refers to something that is conveyed by a text without being explicitly stated by the author.
2. Privilege subtext: builds up tension in a story by revealing important information about the plot to the reader before a character discovers it. Revelation subtext: gradually hints at and builds up to an underlying message in the narrative until eventually revealing it. Subtext through questioning: occurs when the reader's curiosity is sufficiently aroused by clues in the text to make them want to answer questions and solve problems for themselves before the characters do..
