

ANSWERS

1. Bigger has never been around any white people, and all of his ideas about what it will be like working for the Dalton's come from images of rich white people that he has seen in the movies.
2. Many white people watching the movie have probably spent very little time around black people, and they don't know anything about them except for the images of the black savages in the jungle.
3. To a very large extent, the attitudes that blacks and white have about each other are shaped by popular culture rather than firsthand experience.
