

ANSWERS

Direct appeal to strong emotions such as pity, fear, anger, or patriotism

Appealing to people's fear or distrust of strangers or foreigners

Presenting oneself as "a regular person"

Reasoning that seems logical on the surface but actually isn't

Attacking someone's character instead of presenting a logical argument

Arguments based on group mentality; arguments that claim to represent the whole group