

ANSWERS

A tragic hero is essentially good and traditionally of noble birth, he acts appropriately and consistently, and he is believable. The audience bonds emotionally with the tragic hero. He usually has a tragic flaw that forces the audience to fear him without losing any respect for him; and the audience feels pity for him at the end.