

Creating Situational Irony

You can create situational irony in your story by setting up a sequence of events that follow this pattern:

1. Your character misunderstands or misinterprets a situation.
2. Your character the acts on that misunderstanding.
3. Your character then experiences unexpected things as a result of that misunderstanding.

DIRECTIONS: Brainstorm how each of the three steps might be used in your story.

1. Your character misunderstands or misinterprets a situation.

2. Your character the acts on that misunderstanding.

3. Your character experiences unexpected things as a result of that misunderstanding.
