

ANSWERS

1. the release of emotions resulting in a state of moral or spiritual renewal and/or relief from anxiety or stress.
2. When Romeo drinks the poison and dies because he thinks Juliet has done the same.
3. This scene evokes pity for the young lovers. It is also relatable because everyone has experienced loss, and the play allows them to relive and release any pent up emotions they may have from their own loss. It also evokes pity because the situation was avoidable; it calls the audiences to ponder how holding onto silly grudges and bad feelings can have tragic consequences.
