

Chinese New Year

Answer Key

Correction Marks

In the vibrant village of Dragonville, the most exciting time of the year was about to arrive - Chinese New Year! The villagers were busier cleaning their homes, hanging red lanterns, and preparing delicious feasts to celebrate the coming year.

Children were especially excited because they knew that during Chinese New Year, they would receive red envelopes, or "hongbao," filled with lucky money. They wore colorful clothes, often red, to symbolize good fortune.

The dragon and lion dancers practicing their dazzling routines, getting ready to perform in the grand parade. The air was filled with the delightful scented of dumplings and other special treats.

When the big day arrived, Dragonville came alive with festivities. Drums boomed, firecrackers popped, and the dragon and lion dancers danced in a mesmerizing display of colors and energy. It was a day filled with laughter, joy, and the promise of a prosperous year ahead. The children eagerly collected their hongbao feeling lucky and grateful for the traditions that made Chinese New Year such a magical time in Dragonville.

Complete Passage

In the vibrant village of Dragonville, the most exciting time of the year was about to arrive - Chinese New Year! The villagers were busy cleaning their homes, hanging red lanterns, and preparing delicious feasts to celebrate the coming year.

Children were especially excited because they knew that during Chinese New Year, they would receive red envelopes, or "hongbao," filled with lucky money. They wore colorful clothes, often red, to symbolize good fortune.

The dragon and lion dancers practiced their dazzling routines, getting ready to perform in the grand parade. The air was filled with the delightful scent of dumplings and other special treats.

When the big day arrived, Dragonville came alive with festivities. Drums boomed, firecrackers popped, and the dragon and lion dancers danced in a mesmerizing display of colors and energy. It was a day filled with laughter, joy, and the promise of a prosperous year ahead. The children eagerly collected their hongbao, feeling lucky and grateful for the traditions that made Chinese New Year such a magical time in Dragonville.