World Crocodile Day

Answer Key - Correction Marks

In a wild and winding river, there lived a curious boy named Max who have a fascination with crocodiles. Every weekend, he and him family would take boat trips along the river, where they often spotted these powerful reptiles basking in the sun. Max admired their impressive strength and ancient wisdom from a distance, but he know that approaching them was risky.

One sunny day as they were slowly cruising downstream, Max spotted a baby crocodile stranded on a riverbank. It looked scared and lost. Max's heart filled with compassion, and he new he had to help. With great caution and the guidance of his parents, Max carefully scooped up the tiny crocodile and gently placed it back in the water. As the baby croc swam away, Max realized that even though crocodiles were mighty and formidable, they deserved respect and protection, just like any other creature in the wild. From that day on, Max continue to admire crocodiles from afar, knowing that they played an essential role in the river's ecosystem, and he was proud to have been a friend to one, if only for a moment.
