

Name _____

National Jellybean Day

Answer Key

Correction Marks

Jellybeans are made primarily from a mixture of sugar, Corn syrup, and starch. These three key ingredients form the base of the candy To create the signature jelly-like texture, the mixture is cooked and then allowwed to cool, creating a pliable and moldable substance.

Once the base is prepared, its divided into batches for flavoring and coloring. Various natural and artificial flavors are added to give each jellybean its distinct taste, ranging from fruity to spicy to savory. Similarly, food-grade colorings are used to achieve the vibrant and varied hues that jellybeans are known for After flavoring and coloring, the candy mixture is poured into bean-shaped molds, where it cools and solidifies into the familiar jellybean form. Once the beans are removed from the molds, they are polished with a sugary glaze to give them a shiny appearance and provent sticking. The end result is a colorful assortment of jellybeans, each with its own unique flavor and appearance, ready to delight candy lovers of all ages.

Complete Passage

Jellybeans are made primarily from a mixture of sugar, corn syrup, and starch. These three key ingredients form the base of the candy. To create the signature jelly-like texture, the mixture is cooked and then allowed to cool, creating a pliable and moldable substance.

Once the base is prepared, it's divided into batches for flavoring and coloring. Various natural and artificial flavors are added to give each jellybean its distinct taste, ranging from fruity to spicy to savory. Similarly, food-grade colorings are used to achieve the vibrant and varied hues that jellybeans are known for. After flavoring and coloring, the candy mixture is poured into bean-shaped molds, where it cools and solidifies into the familiar jellybean form. Once the beans are removed from the molds, they are polished with a sugary glaze to give them a shiny appearance and prevent sticking. The end result is a colorful assortment of jellybeans, each with its own unique flavor and appearance, ready to delight candy lovers of all ages.