

Name _____

January Everyday Edits

National Penguin Day

National Penguin Day, celebrated on January 20th, is a day dedicated to raising awareness about these charming and iconic birds. Penguins are known for their distinctive appearance and unique behaviors, making them popular subjects of fascination and conservation efforts. On this day, people often participate in educational activities, watch penguin documentaries, and support organizations working to protect penguin habitats and populations, recognizing the vital role these birds play in the ecosystem.

Directions: This passage has 6 errors. Find the errors and correct them.

In the frosty land of Frostville, there was a tight-knit group of penguins known as the "frosty five." These five penguin pals were inseparable and always up for an adventure.

One chilly morning, the Frosty Five decided to explore the icy caves that lay beyond their snowy village. They waddled through tunnels, slid down slippery slopes, and giggled as they discovered hidden treasures of sparkling ice crystals.

As they ventured deeper into the caves, they stumbled upon a family of lost baby seals shivering in the cold. The Frosty Five knew they had to help. With their warm flippers, they huddled around the seal pups, sharing their body heat and keeping them cozy until the worried seal parents arrived.

Grateful for the penguins kindness, the seal family invited the Frosty Five to join them for a feast of fresh fish from that day on, the penguins and seals became the best of friends, exploring Frostville together and spreading warmth and friendship throughout the frosty land.