Remembrance Day

Answer Key- Correction Marks -

Remembrance Day, originally known as Armistice Day, has its origins in the aftermath of World War I. The armistice that ended the First World War was signed on November 11, 1918, at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, marking the cessation of hostilities on the Western Front. The first Armistice day was observed in 1919, one year after the end of the war, to commemorate the soldiers who had lost their lives in the conflict. It was a day of remembrance and reflection on the immense human toll of the war, with ceremonies held in many countries that had been involved in the conflict.

In the years that followed, Armistice Day evolved into Remembrance Day, and its scope expanded to honor all military personnel who had perished in service to their countries during World War I and subsequent conflicts. The red poppy flower, inspired by the famous war poem "In Flanders Fields" by John McCrae, became a symbol of remembrance and was adopted as a fundraising emblem to support veterans and their families. Today, Remembrance Day is observed in many nations around the world, with various traditions and ceremonies, but the central theme remains the same: to remember and pay tribute to those who made the ultimate sacrifice in the pursuit of peace and freedom.
