

ANSWERS

The first 10 Amendments to the Constitution.

Many of its writers felt that it was not needed because the Constitution itself was written in such a way (its structure of limited power/checks and balances) as to protect its citizens.

Some states did not want to ratify the Constitution without a Bill of Rights. Eventually, five states refused to sign the Constitution unless a Bill of Rights was included.