

ANSWERS

The first 10 Amendments to the Constitution.

Many of the writers of the Constitution felt that the Bill of Rights was not needed because the Constitution itself was written in such a way (its structure of limited power/checks and balances) as to protect its citizens. Some states did not want to ratify the Constitution without a Bill of Rights. Eventually, five states refused to sign the Constitution unless a Bill of Rights was included.