

ANSWERS

1. a well-matched and constantly re-appearing rival whom the protagonist cannot overcome.
2. Victor
3. Frankenstein
4. Victor exhibits hubris by trying to create a living being from dead flesh.
5. Yes. Victor is destroyed by his monster. His pride at his scientific achievement adds to his hubris, and what he thinks was his triumph turns out to be his downfall. This is poetic justice because in creating his monster he exceeded the limitations of what a human being is/should be able to do.
