Enjambment in Song

Enjambment is a literary device found in poetry. Many poems have lines with a natural pause at their ends, either because they have reached the end of a phrase, or because the line is end-stopped with punctuation. In enjambment, though, a thought continues over from one line into the next. Enjambment is also found in song lyrics, which are also composed of lines, making them very similar to verse.

DIRECTIONS: Find a song that you like that uses enjambment. Write four to six lines of the song below. Circle the enjambed line(s),
