

ANSWERS

1. Vernacular is the way that people talk everyday.
2. Vernacular is appropriate in situations where you want to sound natural; a conversational style is easy to read and can create a bond between the writer/speaker and the reader/listener. It can be easier to express some concepts in the vernacular.
3. Vernacular is not appropriate in situations that require formal writing: business situations, etc.
4. because it shows how people really talk; and it conveys a lot about the character speaking.
