

Intertextuality

TRUE OR FALSE

1. Intertextuality refers to the fact that all texts are interconnected.

2. When considering intertextuality, the word "text" applies only to works that are written.

3. Every text that is created is affected by the content, reasoning, and aesthetic choices of all the texts that preceded it.

4. Fan fiction is a great example of intertextuality.

5. Texts are usually created independently of the culture from which they originate.

6. There are many different forms and manners of expressing similar cultural, religious, political, and moral ideologies.

7. Latent Intertextuality is when the author consciously chooses to reference or draw upon another work, creating a relationship between the new work and the old one.

8. Profound cultural events can have an impact on the form, content, and style of the texts that come out of that event.
