

ANSWERS WILL VARY

They add different points of view to a story; they can be comic relief; they can represent a cynical, pessimistic attitude about something; it can be a way to develop/reveal character, as well as a way to reveal how characters feel about each other.