

ANSWERS

A soliloquy is the act of a character speaking aloud to themselves so the audience can hear their thoughts.

An aside is when a character speaks briefly directly to the audience something that is not intended to be heard by any other character(s) on the stage.

A monologue is a typically long speech delivered by one character to other characters.

A colloquy is a conversation or dialogue.