

ANSWERS MAY VARY

Readers read genres that they like, and they expect stories in a particular genre to deliver a particular kind of experience. They don't want to read the same story over and over again, but they do want to see the same recurring things in stories within a genre: these are called tropes. Tropes help define a genre. The way a writer handles familiar tropes can also distinguish writers of skill.