

Name _____

Converting Teaspoons, Tablespoons, and Fluid Ounces

Converting volumes between teaspoons, tablespoons, and fluid ounces, commonly used in cooking recipes

1) Jessica is making lemonade and the recipe calls for 2 tablespoons of lemon juice. How many teaspoons is this? Answer: 6 teaspoons	2) David needs 3 fluid ounces of soy sauce for his stir-fry. How many tablespoons is this? Answer: 6 tablespoons
3) Jessica needs 1 fluid ounce of lemon juice for her cocktail recipe. How many tablespoons is this? Answer: 2 tablespoons	4) Tom's recipe for spaghetti sauce calls for 6 teaspoons of garlic powder. How many tablespoons is this? Answer: 2 tablespoon
5) Sarah is baking cookies and needs $\frac{1}{2}$ fluid ounce of vanilla extract. How many teaspoons is this? Answer: 1 teaspoon	6) John is making pancakes and the recipe calls for 3 tablespoons of melted butter. How many fluid ounces is this? Answer: 1.5 fluid ounces
7) Alex wants to make gravy and the recipe requires 3 fluid ounces of chicken broth. How many tablespoons is this? Answer: 6 tablespoons	8) Rachel needs 4 tablespoons of honey for her tea. How many teaspoons is this? Answer: 12 teaspoons
9) Mike's recipe for marinade calls for 2 tablespoons of soy sauce. How many fluid ounces is this? Answer: 1 fluid ounce	10) Mary is making salad dressing and needs $\frac{1}{4}$ cup of balsamic vinegar. How many tablespoons is this? Answer: 4 tablespoons