

Redundant Words

Redundant means unnecessary. When words are redundant, it means they can be left out of a sentence without affecting its meaning. To avoid redundancy means to not say the same thing more than once.

DIRECTIONS: Rewrite the sentences to remove redundancy.

Roger immediately fell in love at first sight with the dog. She was small in size, and she had a long, furry coat. She was energetically active, and Roger knew he would have a wonderful fun time playing with her. He smiled happily.

There was a consensus of opinion in the class: no more homework. The class voted to elect Frank to be the one to deliver the news to their teacher. Frank was nervously anxious about it, but he got the job done.
