

Name _____

The Impossible Newsroom

Editorial Assignment - Each report contains a stated number of misspelled vocabulary terms. Circle every spelling error, then record the correct forms beneath the article.

Town Elects a Pigeon as Official Spokesperson (5 spelling errors)

After a lengthy public debate, the town council selected a pigeon to represent the local constituency. Supporters praised the bird's unusual charismaa and claimed its calm behavior could reduce political acrimonie. Critics called the decision a ridiculous contrivence, but the mayor insisted that the appointment might ameliorrate tensions during future meetings.

Corrections

Museum Displays a Painting That Changes Its Mood (6 spelling errors)

Visitors at the city museum reported that a mysterious portrait appeared cheerful in the morning and despondant by evening. One curator offered an esoteric explanation involving light, color, and human perception. Another suggested that the effect was merely an elaborate illushion created through chromatic contrast. Although the artist's identity remains apocrifal, critics praised the painting's multifacetted design and called the experience nearly ineffible.

Corrections

Scientists Discover a Cloud That Insults People (8 spelling errors)

Meteorologists investigating an unusual storm reported that the cloud produced an extremely acerbick voice. Witnesses described its comments as insulting, condesending, and occasionally blasphemus. Researchers first dismissed the reports as a fabricasion, but multiple recordings appeared to corroborate the witnesses. One scientist proposed that atmospheric electricity had created a bizarre manifestasion. Another argued that the conclusion was equivicle because the available evidence remained limited. Officials urged the public not to exascerbate the situation through exaggerated rumors or frivolous social-media posts.

Corrections
